PSC Transportation Enforcement Manager Chosen to Update National Motor Carrier Safety Materials

Reggie Bunner, a Manager in the Public Service Commission Transportation Enforcement Division, has been chosen to participate in a project that will improve safety for everyone traveling on public roadways. Bunner is one of only 13 officials in the country who will create new materials for the Compliance, Safety and Accountability (CSA) Program. The program is used by the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA) to measure motor carrier and driver performance.

The purpose of the CSA program is to hold motor carriers and drivers accountable for their role in highway safety. The new materials being developed for the program will give commercial motor vehicle drivers instant online access to current safety rules and regulations as well as FMCSA's newly implemented Safety Measurement System ratings, including information about violations and penalties. This will help both drivers and enforcement officers to ensure full compliance during roadside inspections.

"Our primary goal is to reduce fatalities. That hinges on our ability to conduct clean, successful roadside inspections. If we get motor carriers to comply, the roads will be safer for everyone," said Bunner.

Bunner, who has been a PSC Transportation Enforcement Officer since 1992, helped update the group's Hazardous Materials Training materials in 2012.
